GÜNTHER REINERT

1928–1979

As symbolized in the co-editorship of this volume, much of his scholarly life has been devoted to the creation of the field of documentation and information in psychology.

Preface

Communication is to scientists what nutrition is to organisms: it is necessary for both maintenance of activity and growth. The International Union of Psychological Science has always considered international communication and exchange among psychologists one of its main purposes and fields of activity. Originally, this goal was pursued mainly by bringing together psychologists in international congresses. While still conceiving the organization of congresses, symposia, colloquia, and workshops as one of its major activities, the I.U.P.S. gradually developed complementary means allowing psychologists, internationally, to communicate more easily with each other. The publication of an International Directory of Psychologists is one of them. The need for a regularly updated list of psychologists all over the world, giving their addresses, functions, fields of research, and interests is obvious for those who want to enter into correspondance or to exchange information and reports. The need is felt also by those who want personal and factual data about psychological activities in different countries. The U.S.A., having its own Directory of psychologists, published by APA, the new edition of our International Directory, following its predecessors' policy, extends its coverage to all other countries insofar as information was available.

It has often been pointed out that psychologists, in exploring their field of research, neglect the use of wide-field binoculars; many of them tend to limit their horizon to their own language area and even to their own country in which psychological problems are produced and cultured by a kind of scientific inbreeding. It is assumed here that a somewhat larger exposure to the ideas and approaches of psychologists working in different countries and cultural settings may produce favorable conditions for complementary developments and renewals in our discipline.

It will be a fine reward, I am sure, for all those who collaborated in the preparation of this Directory, especially for the editors who spared no efforts in completing it, if this new edition is able to contribute in a modest way to facilitate and broaden communication among psychologists all over the world. The IUPS would appreciate it especially if this list of individual psychologists could help also in improving contacts with those developing countries in which national societies of psychology are not yet organized and where psychological research is in special need of communication and exchange.

Editors' Introduction and Reader's Guide

Publication of the Third Edition of the International Directory of Psychologists provides the occasion for a brief review of the history of the Directory, and the opportunity to acknowledge the cooperation of the international community of psychologists in the enterprise.

A Committee of the Division of Anthropology and Psychology of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council, U.S.A., conceived the idea of the Directory, established its guidelines and supervised the preparation of the First Edition. Dr. H.S. Langfeld provided initial leadership and was succeeded by Dr. E.G. Boring, who became Chairman of the Committee. Dr. Boring, in his introduction to the First Edition, cites Murchison's 1932 Psychological Register as an earlier example of a similar effort to stimulate and improve scientific communication among psychologists, internationally. When the First Edition of the Directory appeared, in 1958 (1) it contained the names of approximately 7,000 psychologists in 38 countries outside of the United States. Editorial responsibilities were shared by Dr. Eugene Jacobson, then at the University of Michigan, and Dr. H.C.J. Duijker, University of Amsterdam.

The Second Edition of the Directory, published in 1966 (2) was sponsored by the International Union of Psychological Science. The member societies of the I.U.P.S. and the Committee on Publications and Communication of the I.U.P.S. participated in the collection of questionnaire information in many countries.

The project was supported by the National Science Foundation, U.S.A., UNESCO and the I.U.P.S. member societies. Eight thousand psychologists from 80 countries are listed in the Second Edition. Editorial responsibilities were again shared by Dr. Jacobson, now at Michigan State University, and Dr. Duijker. (2)

The Third Edition is again a collaborative effort of the I.U.P.S. and its member societies. The National Science Foundation and UNESCO and the national societies provided substantial support. The cooperation of individual psychologists was essential. Approximately 17,000 psychologists from 100 countries are represented.

Dr. Günther Reinert, University of Trier, accepted the responsibility of being Co-Editor, with Jacobson, of the Third Edition. Reinert organized and supervised the collection of data and the preparation of the volume at the University of Trier. While engaged in the final stages of the project, Dr. Reinert died in July, 1979. Those of us who have worked with Dr. Reinert have lost a valued colleague and friend. His associates at Trier have followed his guidance in completing the Directory. Dipl. Psych. Detlef Herrig assumed many of the editing responsibilities.

Who Are The Psychologists Listed in the Directory?

Because the American Psychological Association publishes a readily available Directory of Psychologists in the United States, it was decided that the International Directory should not duplicate that effort, but, rather, should represent psychologists in all countries outside of the United States.

In most of the countries where there are national Psychological societies, mailing and collecting questionnaires was done by the officers of the societies.

In the remaining countries, contacts with psychologists have been made through a variety of professional sources, including international psychological societies affiliated with the I.U.P.S., universities, research institutes, local agencies, and individual psychologists.

(1) Jacobson, E.H., & Duijker, H.C.J., (Eds) International Directory of Psychologists, Exclusive of the U.S.A., Assen, The Netherlands, Royal Van Gorcum & Comp., 1958.

(2) Duijker, H.C.J., & Jacobson, E.H., (Eds) International Directory of Psychologists, Exclusive of the U.S.A., Second Edition, Assen, The Netherlands, Royal Van Gorcum Ltd., 1966.

It was the intention of the sponsors and the editors to produce a directory that would include a large percentage of the professional psychologists, rather than one limited to the better known persons in the various countries. And, because psychology is developing at different rates in different countries, it was not considered desirable to impose a set of common standards for inclusion. Directory entries were prepared for all persons who returned questionnaires with the exception of a relatively small number who were clearly not in the field of professional psychology.

Format of the Entries

The following information from the questionnaire was included in the entries:

Name and title

(1) sex

(2) date and place of birth

(3) mailing address

(4) highest academic degree

(5) present position

(6) employing institution

(7) membership in psychological associations (numbers refer to a numerically ordered index of national/international associations given on page 579)

(8) major fields of interest or research in psychology

For most of the entries, information from the questionnaire was complete and readily converted into a standard format. However, there were some questionnaires that were difficult to interpret and, in some cases, data were not furnished. The following comments illustrate the kinds of problems that were encountered.

Name and title: editorial judgment had to be exercised in some cases where it was not clear whether a name was a first name or a last name. The use of the title of Professor differs among the countries. We accepted the respondent's identification.

Item 3: Mailing addresses are presented as reported in the questionnaire. We did not try to standardize the forms.

Item 4: There were many variations in the reporting of highest academic degree. We have tried to standardize the entries, and, where adjustments were necessary, have followed the rule of including rather than restricting information.

Item 5: Professional titles reported in the original language have been translated into English, with some loss of information.

Item 6: In most cases the name of the employing institution has been presented as the respondent reported. In a few instances names were translated into English.

Item 7: Respondents reported a large number of professional memberships. We tried to include only those that are related to psychology and have a national or international scope. We accepted the respondents' reporting of the name of the organization.

Item 8: We used the 1977 edition of the American Psychological Association Thesaurus of Psychological Index Terms to achieve some standardization of the reports of major fields of interest or research. However, we did not reduce the data to a common set of equivalents, preferring to reflect the variety of reported interests.

Acknowledgments and Introductory Notes

For each country listed there is an introductory section that includes the following information:

- A. Acknowledgments for the assistance provided by national psychological societies and individuals.
- B. The time period during which information was collected.
- C. Abbreviations frequently used for national institutions.
- D. Frequently reported academic degrees.
- E. Special rules for preparing data for the entries.

General Acknowledgments

As in any collaborative exercise of this kind, many colleagues have contributed wisdom, guidance, time and energy to insure its success.

We appreciate the cooperation of the member societies of the I.U.P.S., the I.U.P.S. Assembly and Executive Committee and Committee on Publication and Communication. We are grateful to Professor H.C.J. Duijker, who although prevented by other commitments from assuming active editorial functions, made his experience with the first two editions available to us when we were planning this volume.

Dr. Roger Piret, General Secretary-Treasurer of the International Association of Applied Psychology, helped to establish contacts with psychologists in countries where the I.U.P.S. does not have member societies. Dr. Luiz Natalicio, Secretary-General of the Interamerican Society of Psychology, assisted with our work in Latin America.

The American Psychological Association made many of its resources available to the project.

It was at the Zentralstelle für Psychologische Information und Dokumentation, University of Trier, where most of the actual editorial work was performed. Therefore, we are particularly grateful to all fellow workers of that center who contributed to the preparation and editing of this volume. Jürgen Wiesenhütter assisted in the adaptation of questionnaires and editorial management. Manfred Opitz gave his support in the many questions of foreign language translations. Sabine Grossmann, Dietlind Lindenmeyer, and Hannelore Weiss were responsible for the typographic transformation of the questionnaire data and for the index. Finally, Matthias Kapp and Ursula Seeling of the Technical Department of the University of Trier contributed to the typographic composition of the Directory. We owe special thanks to all of them.
